Two houses on it in 1915. Marshall Rumsey an operator? Got part title to the land - little bit shrewd, now always honorable. Later Wood Working Co. put up on part of the land. Had come to the US in 1854 from Bavaria to avoid military service. Had passage paid to Chicago. Agent in NY sold land in Bennington Hills. Poor season. Lost everything. Came to Batavia. Rented at Seven Springs. Boys worked on farms. Girls picked berries. Grandfather Folk bought 10 acres, from old railroad to Brown Farm on Ellicott Street - to Howard Street - after the Civil War. 3 sons. 2 daughters. Oldest son Casper (Mike and Casper ran a farm for years) bought a farm in Bethany. Raised pears. Father put up 5 acres as deposit on son's farm. One bad year Rumsey couldn't give time. Claimed five acres. Father had built a house and barn on the ten acres, where Mrs. Byrne was

Gautieri Beauty Parlor

The beauty parlor in the Kings Plaza mini-mall belonged to Connie Gautieri, the first Mrs. Gautieri. Vinnie Gautieri is her son, adopted by Vito when he married her. He gave her the beauty parlor, and her sister operated it. Vito's sisters also owned and ran a beauty parlor, but it was in the theatre building - I suppose the New Family. They are now dead of cancer. So is Connie. Vito married a pretty, tall young blonde and has three children by her. All above from Kittie.	no date

Winegar speculates on number of houses said by new owners to be haunted.	4-12-1995
Dick Comeau, who bought the house at 7 Ellicott Avenue sometime in the 1960s or 70s from Dr. Tooker, says that Dr. Tooker told him that he had seen or heard David Mix up in the attic. Comeau remodeled the attic and says Mix never appeared thereafter. Benjamin and Evelyn Oliver bought 7 Ellicott in the 90s and I mentioned the possibility that David Mix might still be around. She tells me that sometime recently her son was alone in the house, sleeping on the second floor, and heard someone moving about above him. On another occasion her sister was here from the south for a few days, and also remained alone in the house for a few days, sleeping on the third floor, and says she heard similar noises. The following is an undated letter with two pictures:
Dear Ruth:
About three years ago we were working at a house in Byron, New York, built in the mid 1800s. The current resident and owner related a ghost story concerning the house that I thought you might find interesting.
The owner had been living in the house less than a year the first time the apparition appeared. The boy friend was sitting in the living room one evening reading the newspaper. He felt the presence of someone in the room. He glanced up expecting to see a family member. Instead, he was startled to see the form of a young girl, possibly in her teens, dressed in blue, standing next to his chair. The vision only lasted a second and then was gone.
Some weeks later, again in the evening, the couple were going to bed. The women was leading the way going down the hall when she suddenly stepped to one side. The young girl in blue had appeared again, standing in the hallway.
The explanation offered is that the house was the early residence of a doctor. In those days there were no hospitals so it was common practice for doctors to occasionally keep more seriously ill patients in their homes to give them treatment. It is possible that the young girl was such a patient who died in the house.
After our work there was finished, I went back to the house for some final adjustment. The house was empty. I completed my work and then called to the

Horse Auction	Annual auction and gear sale moved from Springville to Batavia Downs - Sunday. Great success - hope to return to Batavia for another. Started business - Bill Hopkins - in a small way in Springville seven years ago [1989?] in a little cow barn. Horses	Dr. Manchester went into jail leaving his son in a carriage in the jail yard. It began to snow and the horse was frightened when it turned to hail, ran up Ellicott Avenue at a tremendous rate. The son never lost his nerve, kept the horse on track until it returned to the jail yard. Louis T. Bauer's team ran the length of Main Street, sometimes along the sidewalk, to the Cary House where they ran into the Ebling Laundry team and stopped. Thomas James, driving in from South Batavia, was thrown from cutter when breaking whiffentree(?) - thrown and broke his arm. Straw hats for horses a new fad - picture. W. W. Buxton has them for all of his. First runaway caused by a trolley. Especially fine horse show at the Fair. Buxton horses in spectacular runaway. Village buys a pair of bays for $600. Man says horse pays no attention to autos going forward, but backing auto make him rise on hind legs. Horses are now used to autos as they run beside mothers. There was a time when colts were broken to bicycles, then to trolleys. A colt that doesn't fear an auto rarely fears a train. Of course you've got to watch a colt. Past & Present. Patrolman C. Lewis Snell pursues Branton Milk horse who makes his way home. J. E. Brown on Branton's four milk route horses. Winegar on horses in the 1990s.	3-28-1895 3-18-1898 3-15-1900 7-15-1901 9-23-1903 8-20-1904 4-19-1900 11-12-1910 1-10-1919 6-12-1957 12-22-1960 4-24-1998
Horseshoe Lake	People who used to know the lake well tell me that the tavern that burned at the lake in 1934 was then called The Red Onion. Earlier the Horseshoe Lake Tavern and possibly The Sea View. I have determined that The Red Onion was on the corner of Seven Springs Road and East Main. I credited the Goades with having nothing to do with the deterioration of the Horseshoe Lake Tavern, as it became a haunt of drinkers. Enid Pottle says on the contrary, the Goades were great drinkers and may have found the Tavern a place to their taste. She says that Roger Bommer was a different sort of man, a fine citizen. Enid's brother was in Cornell University with Frank Goade, she says. Somebody else, I can't remember who, hinted that Pasternack was probably right in protesting the purchase of Horseshoe Lake by the Goades; that there was probably a bit of sharp dealing by one or both of the Goades along the way. Mr. Squires (Lorraine Squires' husband) says the tavern at Horseshoe Lake in recent times was on the north side of the road up above the road where a house was built this late fall. That would be to the west of the stream. His brother worked at the lake cutting trees to clear the road. The house was built by Roth's - daughter of the Pask's. The story that the dam at broke this spring is not true. The Corps of Engineers recommended that the organization put in a new dam, and that was done as well as stumps and debris removed from the lake. There is now an Honorary	no date no date February 1992

Houseknecht, Ada (Mrs. PB)	Mixed her own chemicals. She was particularly good at retouching. Two photographers from Rochester, John Heberger and Mosier Studio - in summer - would have her bring their plates to Batavia to retouch them, returning them to

Rochester for them to print. She had to carry the heavy glass plates up the two flights. She had beautiful penmanship. For the trademark on her mates a copy of her signature was used. She liked nice things. The home was on Stafford Townline Road and was an attractive home - now burned. Isabelle thinks it burned while tenants were living in it. About 1909 or 1910, kids knocked out the windows in the little studio in Geneseo and discouraged her. She never had it repaired. Isabelle remembers it as "a dear little place". There was a swing in the barn where Isabelle could swing while her mother worked.	no date
Ada Gibbs went to work in the studio of PB Houseknecht at 15, and married him - he was 12 years older. He owned a farm on Stafford Townline Road. She later bought one in Morganville. PB managed both of them. She a ran studio. About 1901 she set-up a seasonal business in Geneseo. Her father, James Gibbs, built a portable studio for her which was taken to Geneseo and set-up on Main Street. Later she bought a house on Bank Street but never lived in it. She used the old barn on the lot as a place to develop plates. An upright piano box served as a darkroom. In Batavia she had a fine studio on the third floor of 106 Main, with north light. She would lock the plates in a frame made for the purpose and put them in the sun on the roof to enlarge them. Timed them to the second. Ada had an exhibit at the Fair most years. Though her husband ran the farms, she would go to cook for the thrashers. Isabelle Glidden	no date
John McJury worked for the Houseknechts. Ada's daughter, Isabelle did many of the photo jobs. She remembers the trip to Geneseo by horse and buggy, taking the entire day. Later her mother took the Erie train. Ada was unselfish, dramatic, and arty. Every fold had to be perfect before she started a photograph. She had no prejudices about color or religion. She read her Bible but did not attend church after she was about 16. Her brother crawled under the seat in church and pinched a woman's leg and there was a scene, and she never went again. When Isabelle was a teen she found the Methodists strict and proposed to her mother that she switch to the Presbyterians. Her mother said she might do as she thought best. Ada was funny, a clown, one to whom friends went for refreshment.	no date
About 1915.....moved her house to Bank Street from about where V & S Variety and a couple others are now. Gone across the street from bank and parking lot.	no date
Had a showcase on Main Street outside her door. On it was the lines: If pretty - take you. If not - make you. She had "smile" on front of the camera. She posed her subjects meticulously.	no date

	Marian Artman says her mother opened her dress shop in her home at 5 Norris Avenue in 1923 or 1924. It thrived so well that in 1929 she moved to 107 Bank Street. A large house with a bay window on the front, windows to the floor. Marian used to trim this bay window area. Mrs. Johnson used to make regular buying trips to New York where she would occasionally comment on a design - say this neck not over night - that the belt-line should be moved. She was asked to join a dress firm as a consultant, but refused because it would have meant too much time in New York. Mrs. Johnson was a dressmaker and designer of her own creations, and even after her shop opened, made many wedding dresses. Marian had gone with her husband [which see] to Herkimer. After five years of marriage she became pregnant and the doctor, diagnosing a rare blood ailment, recommended that her husband bring her to Batavia. There the parents installed the Artman's in upstairs quarters, and Marian became her mother's assistant. When Jay was born a woman was hired to take of him. Marian tended the shop, occasionally blacking out and having to lie down for a short while, but she had a second child successfully and healthily. Marian took over the buying trips to New York, introduced to the work shops by two local milliners, Killian and Eveland. They found a buyer for her and shared a hotel room. Buyers like Marian sat in little booths with a notepad and the models paraded past, stopping before each booth to twirl and show details. When the out-of-town buyer had made her decision her buyer would bring the clothes she had chosen for a closer look and perhaps change of opinion. One One could also call New York by telephone for special items. Marian says one

Johnson, Florence (cont)	buyer would take her back to the warehouse for items needed immediately, and would then ship them the next day. Her mother hated this part of the business but Marian seems not to have. Customers were the two Mason wives, Lena and Alice, and Alice's daughter after her. Mrs. Bertrand was extremely self-conscious and would allow no one in the dressing room with her. Mrs. Max Pies was also a good customer. Mrs. Johnson did not like to wait on Mrs. Pies and would leave her to Marian. Once or twice a year Mrs. Pies would have a box packed and set to Russia, to which Marian would add clothes left unsold in the shop. On one occasion Mrs. Pies gave Marian a string of cultured pearls from Francis & Mead in appreciation. On another occasion she gave her a coffee table from the store. Very Generous. People would bring Mrs. Johnson a list of clothes children headed for college would want. Dr. Gemmell, then in Buffalo, would bring a group of teachers from UB once a month or so for shopping. Marian remembers Dr. Chenny Spofford in the shop for a dress. Jay would have nothing to do with the shop but Charles loved it. At 5 he would try to help and when the shop had its Dollar Day Sales grandmother would let him sell hats. He would submit to washing, brushing, and dressing to use his salesmanship. The ladies loved to have him give his judgement on hats. He had his personal charm and salesmanship that young. Mr. Johnson lost both

legs and had to go to Hilltop Sanitarium. Mrs. Johnson became ill and had to give up her part in the shop. Elmer Artman, who had opened his own insurance and real estate office died suddenly. Marian was accredited as a realtor, not as an insurance agent because she feared the math studying for insurance agent would entail. James Corbett advised her to keep the insurance business because she had two sons who would grow up to help her. So she applied herself and became accredited as an insurance agent. She sold the shop. Everything was put on sale and the shop closed. Marian says she remembers the figure $5,000 which she thinks was the sum from the sale. This was in 1943. In New York when she could get near the Neiman-Marcus buyer - a young and discerning young woman - she would often order what N-M was buying. Dr. Johnson's sister, an old school friend, went with on one buying trip, but went back to the hotel - buying too confusing.
